Council Hears Update on Plans For Food Safety Center at BARC Construction Starts Soon On Greenbrook Pond

by Diane Oberg

The changing status of the proposed Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition, to be built on the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center property (BARC), was one of the main topics of the June 12 regular city council meeting. In other actions, council voted to oppose federal legislation regarding the transportation of nuclear waste and received a report recommending partial approval of a planned development on the Sunrise tract in Greenbelt East.

BARC

Development Director Jag Bhargava of the General Services Administration (GSA) told council that federal down-sizing and the drive to balance the budget have left the status of the Center for Food Safety project up in the air. Because of staff reductions, the amount of lab space required has been cut by a third and the number of employees to be housed is down to 800, from over 1,000. In addition, funds for the project were significantly reduced in the recession bill recently vetoed by the President. These cuts could be re-instated if a compromise recession bill is approved.

Bhargava now estimates that 35-50 acres will be needed for the project. The GSA has selected a 100 acre site between NASA and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway near Beaver Dam Road. He told council that at its current size, the project could be placed on the site with minimal disturbance of woodlands.

According to Bhargava, the FDA expects that most employees would use the current NASA employees exit from the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. However, trucks and at least some employees would travel by way of Greenbelt Road, he acknowledged. While infrastructure studies are needed, he said, the FDA has directed that his agency hold off on these until a full review is completed of the effect of government downsizing on the project.

Mayor Antoinette Bram pressed Bhargava to consider developing the project on private property, such as at the Greenbelt Metro Station. He expressed willingness to do so, but cautioned that because the FDA wanted its labs within a three mile radius of its existing labs in Beltsville, building both labs and office space on private property may require a larger site than is available in the area.

Council learned the status of the FDA Center for Food Safety project is up in the air.

Nuclear Waste

At the request of councilmember Rodney Roberts, council unanimously agreed to oppose three bills before the U.S. Congress relating to the transportation of nuclear waste to a planned storage facility in Nevada. This issue was initially removed from the agenda by Roberts. At the end of the approved agenda, however, Roberts moved to add the issue to the agenda, "since it is only 11 o'clock."

Other Actions

Councilmember Judith Davis showed the Certificate of Merit awarded the city by the Cooperative Caring Network recognizing Greenbelt as the first participating municipality in volunteer exchanges. The award is in recognition of the newly formed Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service (GIVES).

The Advisory Planning Board's report on the concept plans for a combined condominium apartment/senior citizen housing complex on the Sunrise tract located adjacent to the Holiday Inn property in Greenbelt

East was accepted. Plans call for 110 condominium units in 3- and 4-story buildings and a 106 unit senior housing building. The APB recommends that council approve the condominium project, but oppose the senior housing project because of concerns about compliance with zoning requirements. The board was also concerned about how few parking places were planned for the senior housing project.

Council unanimously approved legislation requiring that liquor license holders in the city will now be charged a city license fee, in addition to fees already paid the county. The fee which will be a percent of the county fee, will range from $60 to $700 per year, depending on the class and type of license.

Council introduced for first reading an ordinance modifying the city code pertaining to parking, soil conservation and property maintenance. Among other changes, the ordinance prohibits the parking of vehicles on unpaved surfaces, requires home-owners to clear sidewalks of snow and ice within 48 hours and includes a clarification that handicapped parking placards are only valid when the person to whom the placard was issued is driving or riding in the vehicle.

The city police department was given permission to purchase the six cars approved in the budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 under the terms of the state police bid. The city cars will have an additional $755 in options over the state police vehicles, including a larger engine and stainless steel hubcaps.

The Greenbelt Astronomy Club has asked council to approve use of city land at the Northway fields for an observatory. In addition, the city is asked to provide a concrete slab on which to erect the 20 foot square building, an electrical hook-up and possibly heavy equipment assistance to move construction materials to the site. This request was referred to the Park and Recreation Advisory Board for review.

by Diane Oberg

This time it's for real (or so it seems). On Monday, May 22, the Greenbelt City Council awarded a bid for the construction of Greenbrook Lake, adjacent to Schrom Hills Park, to Driggs Corp. The $410,300 contract covers all aspects of construction of the 1.3 acre lake, plus a boardwalk crossing the narrow end. Other trail construction, except a maintenance trail, is not included in the contract.

Greenbelt's Director of Planning and Community Development, Celia Wilson, told the News Review that she expects construction to begin by the end of June. While the city is managing the project, all planning and construction costs are to be reimbursed by the county government.

The saga of the lake could serve as a prime example for those complaining of burdensome government regulations. The lake has been planned since 1986, with the initial schedule calling for sending the plans to bid in August, 1988.

Originally proposed as a Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission stormwater management facility, the plans hit their first delay when responsibility for stormwater management transferred to Prince Georges County. Valuable time was lost while the city sought authorization to apply for the required permits.

At about the time that the initial plan was to be put out to bid, the state government warned that "unacceptable habitat losses" might cause it to reject the plans. Then the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers raised the issue of wetlands loss.

From that point on, the lake (and the city) was caught in a series of ever more stringent regulations governing wetlands disturbance. The five acre lake shrank to 2.3 acres and eventually to the current 1.3. It changed from a single lake, to a pair, back to a single lake. Plans for the lake disappeared from time to time in the various regulatory agencies. And beginning in 1990, Mother Nature occasionally took the matter into her own hands, flooding the area to create her own lake.

Another Headache

Perhaps the most frustrating setback for the city came in March, 1994. The city had finally won approval from the Corps of Engineers for a two-lake plan covering 2.3 acres that would disturb less than an acre of wetlands. However, on March 14 the state Department of the Environment announced it would deny the city's permit application, claiming that more wetlands were disturbed than necessary. The state proposed its own plan calling for a single lake, a half acre smaller than the combined acreage of the twin-lake proposal.

The city reacted with shock and disbelief, especially since the denial was apparently done at the request of the county environmental officials. The city had involved the county throughout the planning process and the project is county-funded and being managed by the city at the county's request.

The city fought the state decision, submitting an "alternatives analysis" in November, 1994. According to Wilson, the study's findings of biological benefits of a larger lake were rejected by the state, which found "no justification for a larger lake." Wilson says that the lack of fixed standards for the alternatives analysis left the city trying to hit a moving target.

The final lake design, worked out in a meeting with state and other officials is actually a full acre smaller than the proposal rejected in March, 1994. According to Wilson, the lake itself will be limited roughly to the area that periodically floods. Just 5,000 square feet of wetlands, in the outflow area of the lake, will be disturbed.

However, time was of the essence for the city. If it fought longer, the Corps of Engineers permit would expire, and the state had already indicated that it might contest certain Corps findings, further delaying construction. More recently, the city has been pressing hard to get construction underway before the end of the current fiscal year, to ensure county funding for the project.

The lake will be located between Schrom Hills Park and Greenbrook, on the east side of Hanover Parkway.

Our house is located in an abandoned steel factory. The factory was damaged beyond repair during the war. One of the UN engineers convinced the owner to fix up one of the duplexes that used to be factory employee housing. Paul and I, the engineer, and his fiancée moved in as an experiment. I guess the experiment worked because the owner is now renovating three more houses. It will be nice to have neighbors because we

A Greenbelter Writes Home: Keeping House in Rwanda

by Brandy Siegel McNeill

(This is the second in a series of first-person reports on life with the UN in Rwanda by Greenbelter Brandy Siegel McNeill, who is a fitness consultant there. Her husband, Paul McNeill, Jr., is Chief Financial officer for the UN Peacekeeping Force.

In this installment Brandy describes the vicissitudes of daily life.)

At this moment, it was hard to believe that I'm in a wartorn country. But, today is the one-year anniversary of the start of the war. The UN told all of us to stay home. We brought home enough food and water for a week, our passports, and $3,000 bribe money in the event the war breaks out again.

The view from my bedroom window is postcard perfect! Rwanda is called the land of a thousand hills. It rains almost every day, but usually for only 15 minutes. Everything is very green and lush. The weather is perfect almost all the time. It is about 60 degrees in the morning and the evenings. During the day it is usually in the 80's. There is no humidity, so it is very comfortable. Because we are so close to the equator, the sun is very intense, and I've gotten a tan simply by teaching a 45-minute aqua aerobics class twice a week.

From a distance, Rwanda looks like a paradise. At close range however, it is shocking. The worst slum in D.C. is in better condition. Most of the buildings do not have windows, electricity, or running water. Almost every building was hit by shells and machine-gun fire. Many of the Rwandese people live in mud huts, yet a sense of humor prevails. I saw a tee shirt that read "Hard Rock Cafe: Closed for Renovations- Kigali, Rwanda."

Our living situation is luxurious by comparison. We have a two bedroom duplex, newly renovated (sort of,) new furniture, gas stove and mini refrigerator and a full-time maid, and two guards, 24 hours a day. The maid does all our laundry by hand, iron everything including our underwear, makes the beds, washes the dishes, and washes the concrete floor with a rag everyday. Her pay is $38 USD a week, and since we share her with another couple, our cost is $19 a week.

Letters

Get Well Deer!

Open letter to Mayor Bram,

I realize that you have many more serious problems on your agenda, but in the hearts of a number of little children in our area, nothing is more important than the "recovery" of the Deer at Schrom Hills Park. I am enclosing "get well" letters written to him by my children. (Neighbor children have written, too.) Greenbelt East does not have a historic town center with its identifying mother and child. So we had come to love the deer as a landmark and as an identifying symbol of our part of Greenbelt. The children would say hello to him every time we drove by and tell him of their latest excursions. (Answered by "Mom", of course.) We would go to the park in the winter, and they would bring handfuls of grass to "feed" him. Now the lights shine and the flowers grow as if on his grave. And each time we pass, the children and I look to see if, by some miracle, he has been returned. And the children lament, "I miss The Deer."

I called to inquire when he was first taken away and was told that he had been vandalized, but that the artist who made him is still in the area, and he may be repaired. I am disappointed that I have not seen any mention of the deer's disappearance in the News Review. I just wanted to let you know that there are people who care.

It would be greatly appreciated if you could publish the status of the situation, and whether there is hope of his return. If there is anything I can do to help in any effort to have him restored, please let me know. Thank you for your attention.

to eat. We all want you back. We miss you very much. You are a good friend and I hate you to be in such a mess and in pain.

I would do anything to have you back. We need you to represent Greenbelt and Schrom Hills Park.

I hope to see you soon

P.S. My phone number is 552-5453 just in case.

Editor's Note: City officials advise that the cost to repair the badly damaged deer is estimated at $8,000, to replace the deer would cost $24,000.

Moving Ahead

During football season (1994), I called in my retirement from football and all other sports. That was short lived. I am returning to football with the Lanham Boys & Girls Club 125 pounds. For five months, I was contacted by several clubs and I did not want to coach because of health and previous club problems, but last week's meeting between some of the 1994 and 1995 Board members was so positive, I truly believe the Boys & Girls Club of Greenbelt is moving ahead.

Dave Coley's letter (published in another newspaper) touched a nerve with some Board members. I believe he communicated a feeling that touched everyone. He is a good person, father, coach, husband and community leader. Somehow rumors got started about a person doing this and a person doing that. It makes one mad when someone accuses you of something when you know it's not true. I've been there. It hurts. "If you cannot say something positive about a person, then don't say anything at all."

This fall I will go to Lanham to head coach the 125 pound team. I will not recruit my 85 pound championship players from Greenbelt. I believe they should stay in the community.

I would like to thank all the coaches who coached my three kids and the Boys & Girls Club.

Thanks also to the Greenbelt News Review staff and volunteers for their endless time and service in this community. I can tell you this, the kid's reading levels improved once they saw their names in the paper each week during football season.

I would like to thank Joe Warren for bringing together Marthea Lewis, Mark Markowich, David Coley, Maurice Garland, and Ava Ramey. The meeting last week was the most positive meeting ever. We accomplished a lot. The greatest challenge for the 1995 Board members, along with their other duties, is to come up with an activity to raise money for a 150 pound football team.

Short Sighted Decision

At a Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) board meeting on June 15, several Lakewood residents were there to describe water problems on their property due to stormwater run off. In fact, Lakewood residents were invited by letter, by the City of Greenbelt to attend this meeting to encourage GHI to approve an easement so the Stormwater Drainage Improvement project could go forward. Only one Lakewood resident was allowed an opportunity to describe her water problem. Other Lakewood residents, specifically on Empire Place, stated they had no water problems and did not want any trees removed to complete this project. GHI denied the easement without a full hearing. We are shocked and dismayed that such a critical decision was made without GHI Board members hearing all the facts. It is a very short sighted decision.

There are over 58 homes (out of 108) in the Lakewood sub-division reporting moderate to severe water problems. The county and city have been working on the assessment and preliminary engineering of this project since 1988. In 1993, the County approved project funding. In this time of budget shortfall, the money will not be there forever.

This project will benefit everyone in the Lakewood sub-division. If it's trees some people are worried about, then we had better do what we can to keep the soil here. There has already been loss of some mature trees because of erosion. It's our hope that once the erosion is controlled, trees can be saved. We all want the same thing: A green and beautiful city.

We believe an agreement can still be made. GHI board members need to inspect the site in question to fully understand what is happening. Likewise, the City needs to be more responsive to GHI's questions about loss of trees (how many?), proposed replacement of vegetation, and maintenance of the swales.

Wildlife Art

The U.S. Department of the Interior will be featuring an exhibit of paintings and sculpture by artist John Neal Mullican, through June 30, at the National Wildlife Visitor Center in Laurel.

The artist, John Neal Mullican, is a former resident of Bowie whose home studio and gallery are now located on a private wildlife sanctuary in Sharpsburg, Maryland, next to the Antietam Battlefield. His work was recently selected to represent the United States at the World Expo., and his bronze sculptures can be found throughout Maryland. The sale of Mullican's art has brought thousands of dollars to wildlife conservation efforts in the state, and in 1988, he was awarded The Governor's Citation for his accomplishments. Mullican has been selected Maryland Ducks Unlimited Artist of the year for 1995.

For more information or directions to the Center, call 497-5760.

THANKS

To the Editor:

Ruth Kastner "hit the nail on the head" in her comments about the use of toxic chemical fertilizers. Don't people realize that those chemicals gradually go into the local streams, which go into the lake and, all too soon flow into the Bay and from there into the fish and crabs? True, it is nice to have a beautiful lawn but in the end we will be eating those chemicals that we, thoughtlessly, put on the lawn.

Thank you, Ruth Kastner.

ROOSEVELT CENTER RENOVATION PROJECT

We would like to involve the merchants and citizens of Greenbelt in the design process for our Center. Your input would be a valuable guideline. Please fill out the following questionnaire, addressing any issues you wish. Return it by July 7, 1995 to the City Planning Office, 25 Crescent Road, Greenbelt, Maryland 20770.

As you answer the questions, think about the Center as it is now—what do you like about it? Dislike?

Then think about possibilities for the future—what would you like to see happen?

Be as specific as possible in your answers.

1. SAFETY/SECURITY ISSUES

A. At the Center, do you feel that there is adequate separation of pedestrian and vehicular traffic?

B. Are walkways clear, well-lit, "safe-feeling"?

C. Is there adequate lighting in the central plaza area?

D. Do you feel that vandalism is a problem?

E. Are there any other security-related issues you wish to address?

2. FUNCTIONAL ISSUES

A. Is there adequate seating, appropriate number of trash receptacles, etc.?

B. Is there enough gathering/circulating space in the central plaza area?

C. Is there enough planting in proportion to paved areas?

D. Are there other amenities you would like to see provided, such as drinking fountains, information poster kiosk, more/fewer payphones, boardgame tables, etc.?

E. Is signage clear?

F. Is the Center handicapped accessible?

3. VISUAL ISSUES

A. Is the Mother-and-Child statue well presented?

B. What are your views on existing planting material in the Center?

C. Do you feel that there are "eyesores" in the Center area? If so, what are they?

D. Do you have any other ideas regarding the visual appeal of the Center?

4. USAGE OF THE CENTER

We would like to encourage multiple uses of the Center, to bring it alive with community gatherings. Do you have suggestions for activities and functions that could occur there?

Thank you for your participation in this project. There will be progress meetings throughout this design process to keep everyone informed and involved.

Community Events

Golden Age Club

by Dolores Capotosto

On June 28, at the Golden Age Club meeting, Marge Bergeman will be the speaker. The topic will be the GIVES organization -- a program by which volunteer hours may be "banked" and later reimbursed to the volunteer, or to an organization of the volunteer's choice.

A picnic/meeting of the Council of Senior Clubs was held at Greenbelt Lake on Tuesday, June 20. There are many senior activities going on in the county. For information see Florence Holly or Sue Sharpe, who attend meetings regularly.

Senior group rates are offered at some MD theaters for the new movie "Pocohantas" (this is mentioned as an Academy Award nominee). It might mean traveling a distance to get the group rates. The movie, "While You Were Sleeping", (seen recently at Old Greenbelt Theatre) can be fun for people of all age groups.

Seniors should also check out local entertainment for the summer. The Greenbelt Arts Center has been reviewed by the Washington Post lately and theater-goers can often see their neighbors as the stars of the productions.

Last, but surely not least, on the summer activity list is the trip to "Sight and Sound" on July 20. Along with lunch and dinner, Golden Agers will enjoy two shows, including the new "Noah's Ark", which is reported to be "spectacular!" See Jim Maher at meetings or call him between 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. at 513-5869.

Members are enjoying physical activities at the Aquatic Center, including a Monday Morning class led by Rose Haber and assisted by hubby Ray Haber -- great fun.

Greenbriar to Host

Greenbriar and Glen Oaks residents are getting ready to have fun for the whole family at the upcoming Moonlight Swim on Saturday, June 24. There will be music by the Pro's D.J.'s, munchies, sodas, cold beer, limbo, a bubblegum contest, trivia, prizes, the electric slide, hula hoop contests and grass skirts.

Residents are encouraged to buy tickets in advance and save. Children under age 3 are free. In the event of rain, the entertainment will be held in the Terrace Room. For further details or to purchase tickets, please call Linda at 441-1096.

Fun at Goddard

A presentation "Technology Transfers from Aerospace Research" will be held on Sunday, June 25, at 1 p.m.

The wealth of technology that comes from the exploration of air and space is a valuable national resource and an investment in America's future. NASA's efforts to apply the technology, and those of imaginative entrepreneurs, have generated thousands of secondary applications, "spinoffs" spanning a broad range of public needs and conveniences. Join Nona Minnifield, of Goddard's Office of Commercial Programs as she discusses NASA's technology transfers.

Festival Notes

Carnival Booths

Booth applications for the 1995 Labor Day Festival have been sent to all organizations which had booths in last year's Festival. The Festival also invites new organizations, or those which haven't had booths for a while, to participate this year. The carnival is a good opportunity for organizations to raise funds and to publicize the goals, activities and programs of their organization. Booths often feature a game or attraction or may sell food or other products. For more information or an application form, contact Mike Vaccaro, 474-4431.

Performers Needed

The Talent Show is a traditional event in the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival. Performers of all ages, adult, teens and children, are invited to perform on the Festival stage. Solo or group acts are welcome as are performers of all types—singers, musicians, dancers, magicians, jugglers, and more. Konrad Herling is organizing this year's show and will serve as MC. Herling is the creative force behind the Greenbelt Arts Center's Evenings with Friends, the best-attended variety show in Greenbelt. Talent amateurs are welcome. For more information call Konrad Herling at 345-9369.

Pageant Update

Many Greenbelt girls and teens have signed up for the Miss Greenbelt Pageant (Ages 14-19), Junior Miss Pageant (ages 10-13), and Little Miss Pageant (ages 7 to 9), but more participants are welcome. The Little Miss Pageant has a number of openings for girls who want to have a fun summer, meet new people, make new friends, learn new skills and join in parties, outings and entertainment all through the summer. There is no special talent, or experience, needed. Girls are welcome to join the pageant without any previous pageant or performing experience. To get more information about the Pageant, call Natasha Chavrid-Jewell, 345-8665.

The Miss Greenbelt Pageant will hold its 40th anniversary at the 1995 Greenbelt Labor Day Festival and the pageant organizers are planning a big celebration. All past Pageant winners and organizers are invited to join in the celebration. Since some have moved out of the area, a big search is on to locate them and invite them to participate in the Labor Day Weekend. Many have been located, but the Pageant still needs to locate the following: 1962, Jane Brooks Duval;

1968, Donna Austin Parish (Kling); 1964 Carolyn Finley Flynn; 1971, Beverly Goulart; and 1975, Robyn Davis who are former Miss Greenbelt winners. A number of individuals served as pageant chair over the 40 years. Pageant organizers need to locate: for 1955, Vincent Caruso; 1956, Joe Digostino; 1964 Henry Davis; 1965, Jim Wright; and 1968, Joe Bell. Contact Sarah Ellis at 982-7081, with any leads on these individuals.

Young Naturalists

Watkins Nature Center, Largo, is sponsoring a "Knee-high Adventurers Program" for children ages 3 to 5 years old. There is a fee.

This program is designed for young naturalists and will include a variety of activities, games, stories, crafts, and snacks. This season's club meetings are scheduled for June 29, July 13, July 27, August 10 and August 24 between the hours of 10 to 11:30 a.m. Parents are invited to participate.

Hawk Talk

"An evening of Hawk Talk" will be held at the North Tract Visitor Contact Station of the Patuxent Research Refuge on Bald Eagle Drive, Laurel from 7 to 8 p.m., on Thursday, June 29.

Linda Moore will present the program along with a very special guest, a live hawk.

Advance registration is required.

County Freezes Tax Differential Rates

by James Giese

By adopting enabling legislation, the Prince Georges County Council agreed to the proposal of County Executive Wayne Curry to freeze tax differential rates to municipalities for the new tax year. The council took its action by a six to three vote at a meeting on June 13. If the freeze had not been invoked, Greenbelt tax-payers would have received an eight cent tax cut.

Without the freeze, similar tax rate reductions would also have occurred in most of the other 28 county municipalities-with the result that the county would have lost 2.8 million dollars in revenues.

Under a complicated formula negotiated several years ago, the county adjusts the tax rate in each municipality from that applied to unincorporated areas. These adjustments reflect the amount of services normally provided by the county that are instead provided by the specific municipality. For example, Greenbelt provides its citizens with police service, with county police used only rarely. The amount of the tax differential rates, which are used to reduce the county tax levy, was scheduled to go up this year to reflect increased spending levels by the county in the last fiscal year.

Curry proposed freezing the tax differential as one of many unpopular means of balancing the budget to avoid a $130 million projected deficit. Other unpopular proposals which the county council also approved were expanding the storm water management tax levy to previously excluded rural areas and imposing a tax on casino operations.

Representing the Greenbelt and Bowie areas, County council member Audrey Scott voted against the freeze. Mayor Antoinette Bram described Scott's vote as "courageous." There is the possibility that the municipalities will challenge the freeze in court as not being in compliance with state mandates for counties to negotiate with their municipalities on tax differentials.

New Deal News

by S. Lee Henry

Don't be surprised by a phone call, a knock on the door, a brochure showing up in your mailbox or a friendly face greeting you at the Center and asking if you might like to become a charter member. The new Board of Directors of the New Deal Cafe and an energetic swarm of volunteers are stepping up their campaign to sign up 500 members so that this new co-op can open in the Fall.

Planned as a community living room, the New Deal will feature fine coffees, irresistible desserts, and lite fare. Local musicians will find it a nice place to perform and local artists a place to display their work. Envisioned as increasing community foot traffic at the Center and complementing existing businesses, the New Deal still needs to raise considerable capital for renovations and equipment before it can open its doors to Greenbelt Moms dropping their kids at the pool and Greenbelt "honeys" not quite ready to go home after the weekend movies.

Membership applications can be picked up at the information desk at the Greenbelt Library and will be increasingly available from bulletin boards and local businesses. The application is also available from the Web site <http://www.pha.jhu.edu/-NewDeal/> or via the email address NewDeal@pha.jhu.edu. Looking to make signing up new members as painless as possible, membership volunteers will be going out of their way to help get a form to you and make sure it gets back to us.

Basic memberships and special memberships are available. Questioned about the membership fee, one of the directors was heard to say, "It's not so much what it buys you, but the fact that you're contributing to a community-involving business that matches the way Greenbelt lives. 'You really can't understand what's so special about the New Deal without contemplating what's so special about Greenbelt.'"

If you'd like to help please come to the next open board meeting at 8 p.m. on Monday, June 26 in the GHI conference room.

Featuring "Joe's" tip of the week !!

Hello Again! One of those preventive maintenance items that I speak of all the time is what is called a SERPENTINE drive belt. This belt takes the place of the old style design of multi-belt drive systems. (see illustration). As indicated this utilizes one belt to drive all of the accessories. This type of system frees up valuable space under the hood and unitizes the power accessories, i.e., alternator, power steering, etc. It also allows engineering changes that require rotational differences in different vehicle applications by simply changing the belt travel around a particular pulley.

The maximum belt life is around 4 years or 50,000 miles. After that this belt will develop stress cracks and in some cases, it will break. Look at the illustration. If this happens you lose all power accessories right then and there!! So it's very important to keep preventive maintenance service on these serpentine systems.

One tell tale sign of a potential condition is a chronic squeak. This could indicate a dry rotted belt. As noted most of these systems have automatic tensioners so mechanical belt tightening is not required. The tensioner may need to be replaced if it can no longer apply the proper spring weight against the belt. Another sign is discoloration. If the belt turns a brownish color this is a sign of rubber contamination, i.e., heat or chemical, and this in turn results in a much harder rubber compound.

KEEP A WATCHFUL EYE ON THESE SYSTEMS !!

Hams Skills Test

The Central Maryland Amateur radio club (CMARC) members will set up and operate portable radio transmitters, receivers and antennas at the 73 Court Park on Ridge Road on Saturday, June 24, from 2 p.m. until 8 p.m. The general public is invited to stop by to observe this emergency preparedness exercise and discuss the hobby of amateur radio with club members.

CMARC's Field Day station is part of the worldwide Field Day occurring on June 24 and 25. During this event, amateur radio operators (hams) set up field radio communication stations and contact thousands of other field stations throughout the United States and Canada. Through Field Day, hams fine-tune emergency communication skills including setting up portable stations, antennas, and emergency power generators in the field.

The ham radio operators have been effective in establishing emergency communications during floods, hurricanes, fires, earthquakes and other major disasters. More than 35,000 hams participate in Field Day every year.

are very isolated. And isolation is dangerous in a country still teetering on a continuation of a centuries old war. Also, when all five units are rented, we plan to share the cost of installing a generator and satellite dish (Although my withdrawal symptoms from ER, Seinfeld and Sisters have almost subsided!)

There is a rumor that the factory and office will be made a UN compound soon. If that happens, we will then have 24 hour military guards and running water. I've learned that electricity and running water are gifts to be thankful for. As are family members who mail me soap, Powdered milk, tea, magazines and books.

There is an open air market where you can buy locally grown vegetables (but what about cholera?) meat (unrefrigerated and fly-covered) live chickens (PUHLEASE!), and used clothing (presumably the former owners are now dead.) I managed to find a cake mix. (I've learned not to read the expiration dates.) No frosting, but a supreme treat nevertheless.

Driving is an exercise in terror. There are no street lights, street signs/names for that matter, and you have not truly experienced a pothole until you've seen a missile-created one! None of the traffic lights are working, so you enter an intersection with your hand on the horn, your toes crossed and a prayer on your lips. There are no driving lessons or tests here. If you can reach the gas pedal and find a car that runs, you can drive.

Rules of the road are created by the driver with the least amount of regard for life and limb, and there are several head-on collisions every day. The Rwandese don't seem to care what side of the road they drive on. It's even more confusing because some cars have the driver's wheel on the left and others have it on the right. The occasional wayward cow charging down the center of the road adds to the free-for-all atmosphere. The good news is that I get to drive a white, four-wheel-drive Jeep and, I look great in the driver's seat!

Historic District Study

Hasn't Greenbelt already been designated an Historic District? This was a commonly asked question by many who answered the survey sent out this past Spring. Some people may be confusing the Historic District designation (which is not in effect) with the National Register of Historic Places listing (which does include original Greenbelt).

The portion of present-day Greenbelt developed as a planned "greentown" by the Roosevelt Administration was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1980. This listing encompasses almost 800 acres and includes the original GHI town houses and single-family homes; the commercial, educational and recreational buildings at the center of town, and the remaining 78.5 acres of woods that were part of the 500 plus acres that formed the original "green belt."

The National Register of Historic Places is a list of properties acknowledged by the Federal Government as worthy of recognition and preservation. Properties listed in the National Register must be significant to their local community, state and/or the nation. These properties contribute to an understanding of the historical and cultural foundations of our country.

Listing in the National Register imposes no regulatory restrictions, limitations or requirements on Greenbelt nor does it preclude the alteration, sale or demolition of all or part of the designated property. However, once a property has been listed in the National Register, the federal government agrees to extend certain protections to that property regarding potentially adverse actions the federal government might take. For example, if the federal government were involved in funding or approval of a public works project, that project would have to be reviewed by the government for its potential effect on the historic character and integrity of the National Register-listed site.

While the National Register listing offers recognition for original Greenbelt, it provides few concrete methods of ensuring protection to our buildings, environment and sense of place. On the other hand, designation of original Greenbelt as an Historic District would help protect the community. Future articles will address the pros and cons of such a designation. The next article will discuss the historic significance of Greenbelt and the boundaries of the proposed Historic District.
